

Part I: The propriety of actions

Section i: The sense of propriety

Chapter 1: Sympathy.....	1
Chapter 2: The pleasure of mutual sympathy	4
Chapter 3: How we judge the propriety or impropriety of the affections of other men by their concord or dissonance with our own.....	6
Chapter 4: The same subject continued	8
Chapter 5: The likeable virtues and the respect-worthy virtues	11

Section ii: The degrees of the different passions that are consistent with propriety

Introduction	13
Chapter 1: The passions that originate in the body	13
Chapter 2: The passions that originate in a particular turn or habit of the imagination	15
Chapter 3: The unsocial passions	17
Chapter 4: The social passions	20
Chapter 5: The selfish passions	21

Section iii: How prosperity and adversity affect our judgments about the rightness of actions; and why it is easier to win our approval in prosperity than in adversity

Chapter 1: The intensity-difference between joy and sympathy with joy is less than the intensity-difference between sorrow and sympathy with sorrow.	23
Chapter 2: The origin of ambition, and differences of rank	26
Chapter 3: The corruption of our moral sentiments that comes from this disposition to admire the rich and the great, and to despise or neglect the poor and downtrodden	31

Part II: Merit and demerit; the objects of reward and punishment

Section i: The sense of merit and demerit

Introduction.....	34
Chapter 1: Whatever appears to be the proper object of gratitude (resentment) appears to deserve reward (punishment)	34
Chapter 2: The proper objects of gratitude and resentment	35
Chapter 3: Where there's no approval of the benefactor's conduct, there's not much sympathy with the beneficiary's gratitude; and where there's no disapproval of the motives of the person who does someone harm, there's absolutely no sort of sympathy with the victim's resentment	37
Chapter 4: Recapitulation of the preceding chapters	37
Chapter 5: Analysing the sense of merit and demerit	37

Section ii: Justice and beneficence

Chapter I: Comparing those two virtues	40
Chapter 2: The sense of justice, of remorse, and of the consciousness of merit	42
Chapter 3: The utility of this constitution of nature	44

Section iii: The influence of luck on mankind's sentiments regarding the merit or demerit of actions	48
Chapter 1: The causes of this influence of luck	49
Chapter 2: The extent of this influence of luck	51
Chapter 3: The purpose of this irregularity of sentiments	55

Part III: The basis for our judgments about our own feelings and behaviour; the sense of duty

Chapter 1: The principle of self-approval and self-disapproval	57
Chapter 2: The love of praise and of praiseworthiness; the dread of blame and of blame-worthiness	59
Chapter 3: The influences and authority of conscience	66
Chapter 4: The nature of self-deceit, and the origin and use of general rules	75
Chapter 5: The influence and authority of the general rules of morality, and why they are justly regarded as the Laws of the Deity	78
Chapter 6: When should the sense of duty be the sole driver of our conduct? and when should it co-operate with other motives?	84

Part IV: The effect of utility on the sentiment of approval

Chapter 1: The beauty that the appearance of utility gives to all the productions of art, and the widespread influence of this type of beauty	89
Chapter 2: How the characters and actions of men are made beautiful by their appearance of utility. Is our perception of this beauty one of the basic sources of approval?	94

Part V: The influence of custom and fashion on the sentiments of moral approval and disapproval

Chapter 1: The influence of custom and fashion on our notions of beauty and ugliness ...	97
Chapter 2: The influence of custom and fashion on moral sentiments	99

Part VI: The character of virtue

Section i: Prudence, i.e. the character of the individual in its bearing on his own happiness	104
--	-----

Section ii: The character of the individual in its bearing on the happiness of other people
--	--

Introduction	107
--------------------	-----

Chapter 1: The order in which individuals are recommended by nature to our care and attention	108
---	-----

Chapter 2: The order in which societies are recommended by nature to our beneficence	112
--	-----

Chapter 3: Universal benevolence	116
--	-----

Section iii: Self-control	118
--	-----

Conclusion of Part VI	128
-----------------------------	-----

Part VII: Systems of moral philosophy

Section i: The questions that ought to be examined in a theory of moral sentiments	129
Section ii: The different accounts that have been given of the nature of virtue .	130
Chapter 1: Systems that make virtue consist in propriety	130
Chapter 2: A system that makes virtue consist in prudence	141
Chapter 3: Systems that make virtue consist in benevolence	144
Chapter 4: Licentious systems	148
Section iii: The different systems that have been formed concerning the source of approval
Introduction.....	152
Chapter 1: Systems that trace the source of approval back to self-love	152
Chapter 2: Systems that make reason the source of approval.....	154
Chapter 3: Systems that make sentiment the source of approval	156
Section iv: What different authors have said about the practical rules of morality.....	160